ON CIVIL MARRIAGES

Ferdinand M. Iserman

Maryland, founded by Catholics, was the first state in the Union to inscribe in its fundamental law a statute guaranteeing religious freedom, and strange to say, that of the forty-eight states, Maryland is the only one which has made no provision for a civil marriage. At the present time there is a bill pending before the legislature which was endorsed by a number of leading Baltimore clergyman, among which there were two rabbis, which will make it possible for marriage ceremonies to be performed by justices of the peace, magistrates and other civic officials. We in the province of Ontario, are in the same position as Maryland. Our statutes provide only for religious marriage ceremonies. Irreligious and religious must have the benediction of a man of God to become man and wife.

We believe that a religious benediction adds a beautiful touch to the wedding ceremony, that nothing in a home is more inducive to bliss and happiness than religion, when properly understood and appreciated. We feel that the poetry of marriage can be exalted through the inspiration of religion. But yet the non-religious and irreligious who disbelieve ought not to be forced to submit to a religious ceremony. Recently we were approached by a couple, one of whom was an atheist, the other an agnostic, who desired to be married—with no religious ceremony. We suggested that they go to the state of New York, where civil marriages are legal. They wanted to be married at home—and they submitted to the religious ceremony. Neither we nor they were satisfied. We did not care to foist religion on people, yet the law compelled us to go through a religious ceremony, which meant nothing to the participants. It is for such as these that civil marriages are necessary. Religious leaders should not be compelled to demean their office by giving a religious ceremony to those who scoff at it, and disbelievers should not be compelled to submit at a sacred time in their lives to a ceremony which offends them intellectually and perhaps even spiritually. When men believed that marriages were made by God, only men of God could perform them. To-day when we know that they are made by frail, tempestuous, weak human beings, civil servants should be permitted to perform them. We should welcome a change in Ontario's marriage code providing for a civil marriage ceremony.

ADOLPH S. OCHS AND THE HEBREW UNION COLLEGE

America's first rabbinical seminary, the Hebrew Union College, whose graduates are occupying leading pulpits in the United States, Canada and Great Britain, has recently received some magnificent gifts for its five million dollar endowment fund. Julius Rosenwald, and the Guggenheim family of New York have each contributed one half of a million dollars. These represent the largest single gifts for purely Jewish educational purposes. Other large contributions have been announced from Mortimer Schiff and Felix Warburg, and a quiet but persistent campaign is now on to attain the endowment fund objective before the end of the season.

For several years, Mr. Adolph S. Ochs, the publisher of the New York Times, one of the world's best newspapers, has been quietly working to raise this endowment fund. Mr. Ochs is a son-in-law of the late Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, the father of liberal Judaism on this continent, the

THE DEGENERATION OF THE "GLOBE"

The Toronto Globe was once a liberal newspaper. Its founder, George Brown, was a broad-minded man steeped in the best traditions of English liberalism. Later, it enjoyed the distinguished editorship of Rev. McDonald—a scholar, a humanitarian, a fighter for justice. During the latter's regime it flourished and became an important influence in the life of the country. Dr. McDonald was one of the outstanding Canadians of his day. He had vision which embraced all of humanity. He was an exponent of liberalism in its profounder aspects. To him it was not merely a political shibboleth used to designate meaningless political alignment. It was a philosophy of life; a point of view; a frame of mind; an attitude; a bias of personality. It presupposed a love of people; an appreciation of the dignity of human life; a capacity for judging things objectively, in the light of their own nature and setting; a readiness to put personal prejudice aside and let the truth of a larger harmony prevail. Understanding the deeper implications of liberalism, McDonald observed them in his personal life, and he gave them expression in his editorial utterances and policies. The Globe under him was a great newspaper. Its editorials breathed the free spirit of the noble man at its head. It was a source of inspiration to the host of readers who came within the periphery of its voice. So high was the esteem in which it was held that it was often referred to as the Canadian Scotchmen's second bible.

It is saddening to look at the Globe of the present vintage and reflect at the extent of its degeneration. It still professes fealty to its liberal traditions. We do not know where it stands politically. Perhaps nobody does. It does not matter. But it takes only one glance at its editorial page to realise that it is totally bereft of the spirit of Brown and McDonald. Its lines reveal a passion; not the passion of Brown and McDonald for justice and reason; rather the baser passion for self glorification; a passion of hatred for those who are different.

Read the Globe's editorials and comments on the free speech issue in Toronto. Grant that the Globe's views on social and economic problems are diametrically opposed to those of the communists. Can a liberal believing in the basically liberal principle of tolerance of dissentient opinion, conscientiously approve of the suspension of the elementary right of free speech among dissenters? What does a liberal today think of the Roman attempts at suppression of Christianity, of Christian attempts at suppression of Judaism, of Catholicism's fight against Protestantism, or the Prussian "Verbotens" of everything that savoured of liberalism? The Globe resorted to the specious argument that Canadian society is in a state of warfare with communism, and therefore suppression of free speech is permissible as a war measure. Do we not know that in every instance in history of suppression of minorities by majorities there was the same pretext of war between the two camps? Society was a war with Copernicus when it suppressed his views. Descartes recognized that society was at war with critical philosophy when he stultified his philosophy, and exempted from his critical analysis the claims of the state and the church out of fear of the wrath of the entrenched power? Rev. McDonald would have shuddered at the thought of supporting the suppression of free speech in Canada in normal times of peace. Just because the majority disagrees with the views of an outspoken but powerless minority...

Or read the Globe's ranting on immigration. Admit that Canada is primarily an English country, and as such it is natural for it to accord

I Speak of the Zionist Queens

I addressed the Montreal Hadassah last Monday. Some of my auditors were no doubt disappointed in my message. I did not perform the usual Zionist "act." Think of it, I failed to speak about the beautiful moon, and stars of Palestine! Yes, and I even failed to mention Tel Aviv, the Chalutzim, the hospitals, and the Colonies. Nor did I pronounce "Sweet little nothings," about the remarkable achievements of Hadassah. In other words, I did not attempt "to sell" Zionism. Rather did I select to speak on Palliere's "Unknown Sanctuary." I pointed out that for many Jews, Zionists included, Judaism is an Unknown Sanctuary. I expressed a hope that soon, very soon Hadassah might gather a large number of women, not to give mere aid to the physical needs of Jews. For after all to help alleviate the physical sufferings of our people, is the human and decent thing to do! The interesting and inspirational factor about Palestine, is not the physical—the soul. It is the soul—the "Neshama" of Palestine, which inspires spiritual minded Jews everywhere. And it does not necessarily follow that those Jews who are members of the Zionist Organization are in communion with the Soul of Palestine, or the soul of Judaism. For many Zionists the soul of Judaism is indeed an unknown sanctuary.

The Hatikwah

When I attend a Kiwanis meeting, I expect to participate in Kiwanian songs. When I attend a Zionist gathering, I do wish to join in the singing of "Hatikwah." This was not the case at the Hadassah meeting. Some three hundred women arose when the first chord of the "Hatikwah" melody was struck on the piano. These remained standing in silence. How can such an incident be explained? Have we Jews lost the art of singing? What's the trouble, Hadassahs?

A Contrast in Letters

I offer two letters indicating the relationship between Parent and child to-day, and that of generations past.

The great Reformer, Martin Luther, when he was compelled to absent himself from his little boy, wrote the following:

My dear little son: I see with pleasure that thee learnest well, and prayest diligently. Do so, my son and continue. When I come home, I will bring thee a pretty earring. I know a pretty, merry garden, wherein are many children. They have golden coats and they gather beautiful apples under the trees, cherries and plums. They have beautiful little horses too. I asked the man to whom the garden belongs, whose children they were. And he said, "They are the children that love to pray, to learn and are good." Then I said, "Dear man, I have a son too; his name is Johnny Luther. May he come into this garden and eat these beautiful apples, and pears, and ride these fine horses?" Then the man said, "If he loves to pray and learn, and is good, he shall come into this garden." I said to the man, "Oh dear Sir! I will immediately go and write all this to my little son Johnny and tell him to pray diligently, and to learn well, and to be good, so that he may come to this garden." Herewith I commend thee to Almighty God, Thy dear father, Martin Luther.

But let me offer you a letter of the 20th century written by a fashionable woman to her daughter:

My dear Daughter. I received your pleasant letter in which I read with great satisfaction, of the royal time you are having. What glorious opportunity is yours! How fortunate you are—one round of pleasure from morning to night, day after day! What a lucky girl you are!

I send you enclosed a check which I induced your father to give you, so that you can get some new gloves, etc. It will never do for you to make calls with any but latest colored ribbons, and new gloves. People will think you come from a village if you do not show good form, in such important matters. Always remember you are not the daughter of a farmer. Your father is quite able to have you appear as a lady. Be careful that your hat is worn in the correct angle.

You can take your messaline dress to to the diver's. If you think you'll look more becoming in the foulard I would wear that at the Pink tea. Get all the fun you can, but remember it is essential that you look attractive at all times.

I would write more, but I have to leave for the bridge game at Mrs. Blank's, then rush home to dine with father who after dinner will go with me to see "Six Cylinder Love." Good-bye for today.

—Yours affectionately,

Mother.

It Came to Pass That—

FEBRUARY 16TH

Death of Elijah Montalto, 1616.—A typical Marrano of the sixteenth century, he had escaped from Portugal with some reputation as a physician, and settled first at Leghorn and then in Venice. Hence he was invited by Maria de' Medici, Queen of France, to enter her service. This he did with the stipulation that he should have complete freedom to follow the practises of the Jewish religion and should be exempt from any service on Saturday: though the rabbis of Venice decided that under the circumstances he might travel on that day in case of emergency. At the French Court, he enjoyed high favour, and was appointed by Henry IV a member of his Council—a detail which is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that at this time no Jews were officially allowed to live in France. At his death, which took place suddenly while he was accompanying the Court to Tours, the Queen had his body embalmed: and it was taken across Europe by Saul Morteira (later to become the instructor of Benedict Spinoza) to be buried in the cemetery of the Amsterdam community at Oudekerk.

FEBRUARY 17TH

Printing of First Hebrew book completed, 1475.—There are traces of the art in Avignon as early as thirty-one years before: and it may be that some undated fragments along to the beginning of the second half of the fifteenth century. In the year 5235, however, two presses were simultaneously at work in Italy—one in the far south, at Reggio di Calabria, under Abraham ben Garton ben Isaac; and the other in the north, at Piove di Sacco,—not far from Padua, under Meshullam Cuzi. It was the former who finished his work first, on 10 Adar 5235. He was thus responsible for the first dated Hebrew book. It was an edition of the commentary of Rashi on the Pentateuch—a curious illustration of the hold which the writings of the simple French scholar had upon his people. This is an event of real importance in the history of humanity as well as of the Jews. For had not the Hebrew Bible been printed and disseminated north of the Alps, it is doubtful whether the Reformation would have come about—at least in the form in which it did.

FEBRUARY 18TH

Deliverance at Avignon, 1757.—On the night of 28 Shevat, 5517 (17-18 February, 1757) a certain townsman happened to be making his way through the narrow courts of the carriere (it was thus that the Ghetto was locally called). It was a dark night: for it was approaching the New Moon. Near the synagogue, the unfortunate individual tripped over the coping of the well and fell down inside, head first. Before he reached the bottom, however, he somehow recovered his equilibrium: and he managed to arrest his fall, being extricated little the worse for his adventure. On that day, the Jews of Avignon instituted a public feast, to be celebrated year by year throughout their generations. For, they argued, had this clumsy Gentile perished, and his corpse been discovered so near our Synagogue, we would inevitably have been accused of doing him to death, and would assuredly have suffered. His providential escape has perhaps saved us all from massacre! There is hardly any episode in the whole of Jewish history which is more eloquent of the constant state of apprehension in which our ancestors were forced to live.

FEBRUARY 19TH

Casa dei Catecumeni established at Rome, 1543.—A Bull of Pope Paul III of this date recognized the confraternity founded (by a somewhat ironical choice) under the patronage of St. Joseph to maintain an institution for the reception of converts to the Christian faith. It was overwhelmed with privileges, and given a considerable degree of autonomy. In the result, it acquired a very much greater importance than any similar establishment elsewhere (such as, for example, the Domus Conversorum in London). Later, it became the centre of a shameful activity which was one of the greatest terrors of Jewish life in Rome. It was decided that the sacrament of baptism, under no matter what ridiculous circumstances it was given, was invalidable. Hence the merest parody of the ceremony performed with dish-water by a superstitious nurse or drunken beggar was sufficient to cause children to be torn away from the arms of their parents and conveyed to the Casa dei Catecumeni to be brought up in the Christian faith. Similarly, the pretended wish of any converted relative, no matter how remote, might have the same consequences. It is no wonder that Jews were finally forbidden even to approach the walls of the institution.

FEBRUARY 20TH

Favourable Bull of Pope Martin V, 1422.—From the moment of his election, the nominee of the Council of Constance (a Roman by birth) had shown himself friendly to the Jews: and already on January 31st, 1419, he had issued a bull ordering that they should not be molested. The massacres which took place all over Germany at the hands of the degenerate successors of the Crusaders on their way to their unsuccessful campaign against the Hussites led to the observance by the German communities of three days of fasting and mortification: and recourse was again had to the Pope for protection. In Bull of February 20th, 1422, he enjoined Christians to remember that their religion had been derived from the Jews, who were necessary as evidence of its truth. He therefore denounced all attacks upon them, and confirmed all privileges which they had formerly received from the Papacy. In his later days, however, Pope Martin's attitude underwent a radical change, which received its expression in a number of savage edicts.

FEBRUARY 21ST

Expulsion from Ratisbon, 1519.—This was one of the very oldest Jewish communities in Germany. Its history had been, moreover, less chequered than that of most others, even the massacres at the period of the Black Death having been checked here. Nevertheless, in the second half of the fifteenth century, a growing anti-Jewish feeling began to manifest itself. The Emperor Maximilian was able to keep it within bounds. On his death, however, a complete expulsion took place: and it was not until the nineteenth century was far advanced that a community was re-established in the city. This was the last of the long series of banishments from the various cities of Germany in the mediaeval period. In the whole of the country, the only two important communities left were those of Frankfort and Worms.

FEBRUARY 22ND

Massacre at Pieve, 1543.—In this little place, near Ferrara, Moses haCohen (brother-in-law of the chronicler, Josepo haCohen) had established himself with his family. One day during his absence his house was entered by brigands, who killed his wife and three children, as well as their servant. One of the assassins was subsequently arrested and executed.

At a recent meeting of the Bnai Zion Association of Toronto in solemn session assembled one of the reported messages stressed the need of punctuality at meetings. Now this subject is worth considering by all meeting-goers and presiders-over. It must constitute what the reformers love to call a crying need for notices to the REVIEW about future meetings almost always call attention hopefully to the fact that the gatherings will take place at some hour or other "sharp." This paper never prints the word because when a Jewish meeting-announcer names the hour he always adds "sharp" in the same breath. So you see the word, once upon a time potent, has lost its authority at least over Jewish members. Sad to say "wolf" has been cried too many times to make an impression any more. No wonder officers who feel that it is impossible to preside over a meeting until some of the membership shows up must find the situation very trying. With its usual diffidence this column would like to suggest a way of handling it.

Start out say about two hours before a certain meeting scheduled to begin at eight o'clock sharp and collect the executive. Then open the meeting even without an audience "sharp on the dot in time" at the hour planned instead of an hour and a half later. When it is all over and business has been disposed of by the ones who have been disposing of it for years then adjourn cold. On your way out you will meet the cannon fodder straggling in. But you are the bosses. Keep right on going, heads up, hats high. A thing like this takes perseverance and it might be necessary to repeat the performance and in the more stubborn cases perhaps three or four applications would be found helpful. But time tells and constant dripping wears a stone. You will succeed if you behave as though you expect to. And if you do you will have made Jewish history the very first time it can be truthfully recorded for posterity that the meeting really did open at 8 p.m. sharp as you said it would.

The aforementioned meeting of the Bnai Zion was reported in last week's REVIEW. Officers had been installed et cetera. Space forbade such a posteript about the event as might be given here. Moreover the usual politic editing on the part of the Review postponed at least until now inquiry by other Zionist organization into the modest claim of the Bnai Zion about its part in local Zionist endeavour. For some one at the meeting said: "The Bnai Zion have shouldered the burden of fostering Zionist enthusiasm for twenty-five years. Old backs are still keen to bear this burden but new blood is essential to a more virile and stronger association. We have been told for a number of years that these youngsters (Young Judaea members) are the Zionist leaders of tomorrow. Now that they have received such excellent training it is time and it is fitting that these graduates of such able colleges of Zionism join the ranks of the Bnai Zion or closely co-operate with us."

A five-foot shelf might be written on the above paragraph for what it reveals. No doubt it will be received with a degree of cynicism shocking to members of the Bnai Zion. In the first place is it not galling to be referred to as "these youngsters" just when you think you are grown up? This is never a good approach. It is an unhappy reference not likely to make a hit. Then there is too much patronage in this gift invitation from the old to the young. The Bnai Zion admits being told for years that these youngsters are the Zionist leaders of tomorrow but evidently it took an unflattering long time to convince them. However, now that the Young Judaeans are ripe and have received excellent training and are graduates of all those able colleges of Zionism they are perfect fruit for Bnai Zion picking and fit to be a decoration. But youth has a devastating way of dealing with such generous offers as Bnai Zion makes to Young Judaea. Perhaps the youngsters may even prefer to go it alone. Then what?

Speaking of organizations it will cheer the hearts of thousands to know that there is going to be a new one. It is being cooked up right now and when perfected will be called the Jewish Co-operative Women's League of Toronto or something like that. Its noble purpose is to league together leagues to league together other leagues. Its chief interest, lies in the fact that just when the detached observers think that the hour has come when there can be no new organizations because the reasons for being have been depleted there is life in the organizers yet. The main object in these new organizations is to arrange dates of meetings, benefits, affairs et cetera, so that there can be opener season on the ultimate consumer. Heretofore meetings had to overlap because the dates were set unbeknownst to other planners. A man might say later that he couldn't come to the shul bazaar because he was at the Minsker benefit bridge. But he is going to be properly hunted out of such a cowardly lair as that. An effort is going to be made to have everybody present every time or show cause why. Sie suchen unter der erd, no? I.I.e.

Social Life in 1907—
Do You Remember?—

Miss Sadie Vineberg presided at a meeting of Montreal Daughters of Zion. Mrs. A. J. Alexandor read a paper in which it was pointed out that the building of the new railway in Palestine was part of the general policy of the Sultan for strengthening his position as Khalif but that the calculations of statesmen were not always followed by the expected results. In the "culture part" of the program Miss Vineberg read a paper on "Hannah, the Martyr Mother" and Miss Miriam Bernstein read a paper on "The Jewish Woman in the Home." The chairman urged the members to buy Jewish Colonial Trust Share Club stamps. Miss Sarah Goldstein sang, Miss L. Wetstein recited, and Miss Doris Morris played the piano. A remittance was received from Bnai Zion Association to inscribe the name of Isaac Woolfsohn in the Golden Book. Miss Zenda Seigel was secretary of B'Noth Zion Kadimah Society of Toronto. B. Freidman was treasurer of Winnipeg B'Nai Zion. I. Cohen was president of the Kingston Zionist Society. J. S. Leo, of Montreal, was invited to speak to the Ottawa Men's Zionist Society. I. and are glad to see it, and use it for comparative purposes. We've preached the subject of our laundry work being "snowy-white," and it is quite some time since the figure of speech could be checked up. Now we ask you to make your own comparison, as soon as your bundle of family wash comes home. Our soft water, pure soap, and extra rinsings is the simple secret of our good work. Choose from five different kinds of family wash service, all differently priced—yet moderately. No marking or starching—and each wash done separately. Phone to-day and let us explain.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

Editorial

priority to British immigrants. Does this fact warrant a blustering, arrogant attitude of superiority towards other peoples of non-English stock? Canada is a vast country capable of accommodating scores of millions of people. Non-English immigrants are prepared to come to Canada to stake their all here, and identify their lives and the lives of their future generations with the life and fortunes of this country. Cannot Canada use them? Non-English immigrants have done a great deal towards building up the country to the south of us. The United States is a big, prosperous, happy country—perhaps excessively so. Its national character has faults, but will anyone honestly aver that these faults are characteristics contributed by the non-English elements? In all walks of life, the non-English have taken an active and honorable part. Examine the lists of the leading figures in the higher realms of American culture, in art, in literature, in scholarship—the non-English in origin are conspicuous and valuable factors.

In Canada, brief as is the history of its development, the so-called foreigners have played a not insignificant part in its accomplishments. In the larger centers, the Jews have helped very largely in creating and building up important industries. And their standards of living and citizenship are comparable with the best. In some respects, the Jews are different from their neighbors. They are after all the descendants of an old historic stock. With all their differences, they fit into the scheme of society and contribute significantly to its progress. The Jews of Canada are producing their share of big business men and scholars and artists and poets and philanthropists and idealists—they enrich the quality of Canadian civilization. And are not the other "foreigners" invaluable in the development of Canada's natural resources? In the mines and in the forests the brawn and the endurance of the Ukrainians and Russians are indispensable assets. And can it be denied that the West would not have been developed to its present state of prosperity without the strong hands of Central and East Europeans?

Rulers of a country must have patience and vision. Canada is a young country. Its immigration must be regarded not as a finished product, but rather as seed that has to be sown in the ground to be nurtured and nourished by the soil and the atmosphere until it blossoms and ripens into a wholesome national fruit. Canadian soil and atmosphere have hitherto produced good citizens. The mass of the non-English immigrants have confidence in their country and its laws.
